William M. Welsch, founding and current president of the ARRT of Richmond, Virginia will present “Washington's Lieutenants: The Generals of the Continental Army” on Saturday evening, December 3, 2011 at 7:30 p.m. at the Historic Hale Byrnes House near Stanton, Delaware.

Washington was arguably the indispensable man of the American Revolution but he didn't win the war by himself, being ably assisted by his subordinate commanders. We'll consider and discuss Washington's generals and their background and contributions to the American cause. We'll also review the politics of appointment and command, and assessments of his generals by Washington, his contemporaries, and modern historians. Finally, we'll offer a list of the most important generals of the revolution.
